VINEGAR BITTERS

VEGETABLE FREE FROM ALCOHOL

PURELY D. WALKER'S CALIFORNIA VINEGAR BITTERS

No Person can take these Bitters according to directions, and remain long unwell, provided their bones are not destroyed by mineral poison or other means, and the vital organs wasted beyond the point of repair.

Dyspepsia or Indigestion. Headache, Pain in the Shoulders, Coughs, Tightness of the Chest, Dizziness, Sour Eructation of the Stomach, Bad Taste in the Mouth, Bilious Attacks, Palpitation of the Heart, Inflammation of the Lungs, Pain in the regions of the Kidneys, and a hundred other painful symptoms, are the offsprings of Dyspepsia. One bottle will prove a Letter guarantee of its merits than a lengthy advertisement.

For Female Complaints, in young or old, married or single, at the dawn of womanhood, or the turn of life, these Tonic Bitters display so decided an influence that improvement is soon perceptible.

For Inflammatory and Chronic Rheumatism and Gout, Bilious, Remittent and Intermittent Fevers, Diseases of the Blood, Liver, Kidneys and Bladder, these Bitters have no equal. Such Diseases are caused by Vitiated Blood, which is generally produced by derangement of the Digestive Organs.

They are a Gentle Purgative as well as a Tonic, possessing the merit of acting as a powerful agent in relieving Congestion or Inflammation of the Liver and Visceral Organs, and in Bilious Diseases.

Skin Diseases, Eruptions, Tetter, Salt Rheum, Blotches, Spots, Pimples, Pustules, Boils, Carbuncles, Ring-worms, Scald-Head, Sore Eyes, Erysipelas, Itch, Scurfs, Discolorations of the Skin, Humors and Diseases of the Skin, of whatever name or nature, are literally dug up and carried out of the system in a short time by the use of these Bitters.

Grateful Thousands proclaim VINEGAR BITTERS the most wonderful Invigorant that ever sustained the sinking system.

SELECT MISCELLANY.

The Pot of Gold.

BY REBECCA HARDING DAVIS.

Lieutenant Calderwood was at his sister's house on a visit, during his two weeks' furlough. He was sitting with her one evening in the parlor, while her two children were studying their lesson at the table in the back room.

"So Paul is a lazy scholar eh?" said the lieutenant, lowering his voice.

"No, not at all. He is diligent enough, provided his studies suit his fancy. But what are they? If you look over his shoulder now you'll find him poring over some 'Book of Dreams,' or the 'History of Captain Kidd and his Treasures,' instead of his school books. The boy is deranged on the subject of growing rich suddenly at some bold master-stroke. I wish you would talk with him. You are supreme with him just now. It may be you can ridicule him out of his absurdity. I cannot."

"But ought he to be ridiculed?"

"James!"

"Well, call Clara in, and I'll go talk to him for a while."

Mrs. Forbes beckoned her little girl to her, and the Lieutenant sauntered into the back room, and "I am sorry to say lighted a cigar.

"Over my lessons in the morning? They're so horridly dull, I'm reading now.

"Head of your classes, I hope, aren't you?"

Paul laughed. "No, indeed; nearer the other end. Well, the truth is," throwing down his book and leaning over confidentially, "I got it into my head to make money. Mother has hard work to get along with Clara and me."

"I know, Paul," said the lieutenant gravely.

"How do you intend to aid your mother?"

"Well, sir," whispered Paul eagerly, for this was his first patient listener. "If I had a large sum of money that I could get all at once, without any delay—a large sum—then afterward I could make a scholar or what I pleased of myself."

The lieutenant drew the book Paul had been reading toward him, "Revelations by Clairvoyance and Spiritualism regarding Hidden Treasures." Paul watched him keenly as he read the title over, but not the vestige of a smile flitted over the Lieutenant's face.

"I'll tell you, candidly, uncle, about it," (hitching his chair nearer.) "Fred Parker came from Jersey, near where Kidd buried his treasures. You know the place?"

"Not precisely; do you?"

"Not the exact spot; but it is near Burlington. Kidd buried the chest, and then called on his men to know who would stand guard over it for a hundred years. So one fellow stepped out and stood firm while Kidd shot him through the heart. So they buried him standing over the chest, with a drawn sword in his hand. You've heard the incident?"

"Yes, but——"

"How will I find the place? Well—" Paul began to fidget a little, turning over the leaves of the book.

"Perhaps you will laugh at me, uncle, but I don't see why you should. The ancients called in the aid of oracles and dreams. They knew how to read coming events in the flight of birds or by the entrails of beasts. If we cannot do so too, it seems to me it is because we have lost the power, not because the signs are not there to read. The wisest men have not been ashamed to be superstitious. It is only fools that think there is nothing in the world but what they can see and handle."

"I quite agree with you in regard to the fools, Paul."

Paul, who had been defiant hitherto, blushed with pleasure. "I don't know," he continued, "what credit to give spiritual mediums. Fact is, I've run after them till I'm about tired. They've got all my two last quarters' allowances, and so I've had to go without new clothes this winter. But if I could succeed! Just think! It would make mother easy for life!"

"Very true," said his uncle.

They were both silent for a while, the Lieutenant smoking and Paul turning over the leaves of the book with a feverish haste, glancing up now and then, furtively, at his uncle.

"What put this matter in your head, Paul?"

"I don't know. We really need money so often, and then Fred Parker told his stories of Kidd's treasures, and I see these clairvoyant advertisements in the paper every day——"

"As to these mediums," said lieutenant Calderwood, thoughfully, "my opinion is that they will take your money and you will get no information in return. I never had any intercourse with them, for I have no belief in their ability to tell you anything you do not know yourself. A friend of mine, Captain Johns, told me of a woman, a fortune teller, who made some remarkable predictions—very remarkable indeed. She sketched out his whole career for him."

"Who was she? Where is she to be found?" cried Paul, forgetting to ask whether the prophesies proved true or not—they were most ridiculously absurb and untrue.

"At No. 81 Popular street," said his uncle, after several minutes, hesitation. "And she was to be consulted only at night. But that was several years ago."

"I'll go and see her to-morrow night, said Paul. He was more nervous and unsettled than usual that evening, and sat looking in the fire for a long time.

"The boy is ruined," sighed his mother, "nothing will restore him to usefulness."

"It is a long day until sunset," said her brother, quoting his favorite proverb.

The next night Paul got on his overcoat just after supper, and his last dollar in his pocket. His uncle had not been home during the afternoon. Paul kissed his mother good bye.

"Where are you going, my son?"

"To make our fortune he said gayly as he ran out.

No 81 Popular street was soon found. It was a narrow dark entry, lighted by a red lamp, which gave a ghostly and murderous light. Paul went up the winding stairs, and found at the top a door with a placard, on which was printed with a common pen:

"MADAM D'AUDLEY, SEERESS."

Paul tapped. No answer. He tapped again.

"Enter!" said a hoarse voice.

He pushed the door open and walked in. The room was bare of furniture, except another red lamp, which shed its bloody glare over the gray walls and a black antique chair, in which sat a tall, gaunt woman. She was robed in a loose, falling habit of black from head to foot. Her face, of which Paul could see little but the chin, was deathly pale. Now and then he caught a glimpse of a pair of keen eyes, which he thought were both fierce and threatening.

"I came to consult you," he stammered.

The black-covered head nodded. "It is unnecessary to explain yourself further. Your name is Paul Forbes. You desire to know by what means you may obtain a certain treasure."

Paul was terrified. The other mediums that he had consulted had never told him actual facts,

"When do you hold a seance?"

"Now!" in a hoarse, grating voice. "I need no trumpery tables, nor cards, nor machinery. Do you ask whether I can see into futurity? You have a scar on your shoulder beneath your clothes, an unhealed wound beneath your knee. If I can tell you about these things that others' eyes cannot see, you can afford to trust me for the truth of whatever else I may say. Ask what you will and I will answer."

"How am I to obtain the treasure?" said Paul,

"How should I know what treasure you mean? But pause." The figure moved her hand slowly to her forehead, muttered for a few moments then slowly took it down and looked piercingly at the terrified Paul.

"The pot of gold waits for you, enough to give you fortune and power. Here are the directions by which you are to obtain it." She then placed a small slip of paper in his hand.

"On these conditions," she said, in a hollow whisper, "that you solve the mystery of this paper alone. You are to receive no assistance in reading it; if you do, all is lost. Beware!"

The next morning by daybreak he was knocking at the door of his uncle's chamber.

"What is this?" showing him a paper full of figures, lines and diagrams. "Don't read it to me. Only tell me what sort of a puzzle it is."

The Lieutenant raised himself on his elbow, smothering a yawn. "It seems to be a mathematical puzzle, Paul—the description of some locality, I think. I won't interpret it to you. It would need a good topographical engineer to do that. Where did you pick it up?"

Paul muttered out something and disappeared.

A week after the Lieutenant returned to his regiment. He noticed Paul busy every night with his mathematics and his slate and pencil. The dream book was laid on the shelf.

Several months after, Mrs. Forbes, writing to her brother, said:

"I have something to tell you of Paul which I know will please you. Much to my surprise, he took the first prize in mathematics at school last term. Finding prize taking agreeable I presume, he has devoted himself to all his studies with renewed assiduity. But mathematics seem to be a passion with the boy. He told me he designed studying topographical engineering, the very profession I would have chosen for him. I cannot tell you how thankful I am for his sudden change."

The Lieutenant laughed, but made no other sign.

He heard from his sister, but at long intervals, as he was stationed on the frontier; but every letter brought accounts of Paul's incessant, steady labor in the one direction.

Whether the hope of the treasure still urged him on, or whether he found that mathematics were his proper work and that for which his talents and real tastes best fitted him, we cannot say. But it is certain that at the end of three years he was ready to enter the highest class in practical surveying of the Polytechnic College.

A year later Lieutenant Calderwood was seated in the door of his tent, when two or three strangers dashed up, and a stout, bearded, bright-eyed young fellow jumped off his horse, caught him by the shoulders, shook him, laughed, and ended by kissing him like a girl.

"Paul Forbes! Bless you boy! How did you come here?"

Paul jumped to his feet, turned red, and then burst into a shout of laughter.

"You were the seeress? I know you were!"

"Do not begrudge the dollar for her prophec

The Beaver Argus.

J. WEYAND, EDITOR AND PROPRIETOR.

Beaver, Pa., October 9th, 1872.

RESULT IN BEAVER COUNTY.

THE entire Republican county ticket is elected by majorities ranging from four to seven hundred. Mr. Rutan is probably elected Senator, while the election of Mr. Moore for Congress is in doubt.

THE LATE ELECTIONS.

The State election will probably be about what Hartranft's majority is in Philadelphia, viz: Twenty thousand.

Our returns, so far received from the western counties, show that the Democrats and Liberals did exceedingly well. The east, and particularly Philadelphia, has swamped us.

In Allegheny county the returns, so far received, would indicate that Hartranft's majority will be about forty-five hundred. The balance of their ticket is also elected, if we except the Sheriff and Recorder, which are still in doubt.

A Pittsburgh exchange says, by means of the money power, the official influence of the general government, by colonization of fraudulent voters from other States, and especially by false counting of perjured election officers in the city of Philadelphia, the will of the people of Pennsylvania has been derided, set at naught and trampled under foot, and a man of the worst possible character has been "counted" into the once honorable office of Governor of Pennsylvania.

This is the second time a worthless man by fraudulent means, has been placed to rule over a State, a majority of whose people are honest.

We presume, that with the Governor, the Legislature is also lost, and, as a result, Mackey will remain State Treasurer, and Cameron be re-elected to the United States Senate. Think of it. Hartranft Governor, Mackey State Treasurer, and Allen chosen to audit their treasury operations. And then think, also, of the moral and professedly religious men, who have aided the very worst men in the State to fasten such an array of evil men upon us. While there is much to grieve over in this result, we should not be discouraged; the nominal majority of Hartranft is less than the admitted negro vote.

Pennsylvania is an important State, and her twenty-nine electoral votes have weight. In November the negroes will be needed in their own States, and the New York roughs will be required at home.

The Philadelphia frauds that defeated Buckalew, will be of no more avail than those which defeated McClure; for the Act of Assembly provides for the manner of contesting a fraudulent election of Governor; and the Democracy of Philadelphia owe it to the whole people to take the proper measures to prevent the consummation of, what a large majority of the people will be satisfied is, a gross fraud.

Philadelphia never gave the majority claimed [illegible] and unpunished.

A dispatch from Philadelphia at 2 o'clock this morning, says the Republicans claim from eighteen to twenty-three thousand majority in the city for Hartranft, and it has cost them, perhaps, ten times that amount in dollars.

In addition to their repeaters and imported negroes, it is made a boast of on the streets that they bought up a number of Democratic politicians, which accounts for the increased vote in Democratic divisions. This will be investigated.

From returns so far received outside of Philadelphia, it is claimed that Buckalew will come to this city with a majority of several thousands.

Fraud is charged in several divisions, and certain parties will be brought to an account.

CINCINNATI, O., October 9.—The election passed off quietly. Peace was admirably maintained, and a very large vote was polled in the city. Great interest was manifested in the result to-night. An immense concourse of people are in the streets awaiting returns. Three county precincts show a Democratic and Liberal Republican gain for Secretary of State 116.

INDIANA.—Our news that we have carried the State of Indiana affords us some consolation in our grief at defeat in Pennsylvania. We can defeat Grant even yet, and even in Pennsylvania a defeat by a fraud so manifest as exists in Philadelphia, should only tend to unite us as one man in another struggle against the incendiaries, who would rob the State of it's character and the people of their property.

The Geneva Board.

The English Representatives Condemned

LONDON, Oct. 7.—Lord Redesdale has written a letter, which is published condemning the conduct of the goverment representatives in the Geneva Board of Arbitration, where he says the interests of the country were sacrificed to those of the Cabinet. He also demands full explanations of the reasons which prompted the representatives to act as they did.

DISTRIBUTION OF THE AWARDS.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 1.—If the proposition already made by members of the British Parliament is not carried out, to pay, as soon as Parliament convenes, to the United States the sum awarded at the Geneva Conference, the State Department will advise Congress, through the President, to anticipate the award by direct appropriation out of the Treasury.

Inasmuch as the money is to be paid by Great Britain imperatively into the Treasury on or before the 14th of next September, an appropriation by Congress is required any way to distribute the award, and there is, therefore, no reason why the claimants should not be paid at the earliest practicable moment.

The impression that has prevailed in some quarters that no money would be paid out until the total amount of claims allowed against the Government by the American Anglo Claims Commission in session here was printed, and the balance rendered is quite erroneous. The treaty makes the claims under the Geneva award entirely independent.

THE bold attempt to perpetrate a gross fraud, last week, on the late election in Beaver Falls, this county, created very considerable excitement in that and the adjoining boroughs. Apprehending a statement of the case would be of interest to the general reader, we give place to the following

BRIEF STATEMENT OF FACTS:

By an Act of Assembly approved 3d day of April, 1872, a prior Act passed 1st day of May 1861, was extended to the borough of Beaver Falls, Beaver county. The Act thus extended provided, among other things, that the Clerk of the Court of Quarter Sessions of said county should appoint two Return Inspectors of Election to act at the next election, and thereafter such Inspectors to be elected by the voters of the borough under the provisions of the said act of 1861. These Return Inspectors were authorized each to choose his own clerk and they, together, to count and tally the votes. That is, the Election Board, as constituted under the general law receive the votes, and the counting to be done by the Return Inspectors, and the tally—as aforesaid—to be made up by the clerks selected by them.

On or about the 21st of August three men, named James McMullen, David Roach and Charles Speck, arrived at Beaver Falls, hailing from Philadelphia, and took quarters at the Metropolitan hotel. On the 7th day of September, 1872, these men were put upon the registry list of Beaver Falls under the names of James M. Allen, James Brown and William Smith, and a tax assessed upon each of them, although no occupations were set down, nor did they perform labor of any kind or attend to any business, only "boarded" at the hotel aforesaid, which was marked as their abode on the registry. On the 3d day of October, 1872, certain managing Hartranft men of said borough appeared at the office of the Clerk of the Court of Quarter sessions (who before that date at the request of supporters of Mr. Buckalew had appointed Ira Ransom as one of the Return Inspectors) and presented the name of James M. Allen—alias Speck—above named as the other Return Inspector. Thursday last the Clerk executed the papers and appointed Allen—alias Specks—as requested. On that night, fearing an arrest, Allen ran away.

The attempt at fraud being detected, and the Philadelphia hirelings who were brought here to aid in its execution being chased away, on Friday morning last Mr. Nelson was appointed to fill the vacancy.

It is current that Quay, Rutan, Dawson, Patterson & Co., are denying that Allen (the fraud) was appointed. They say Nelson was appointed. So he was; but Allen, alias Specks, was first appointed; and the Clerk who made the appointment as above stated, neither will nor can deny the fact.

On Friday, October 4th, Alderman Strain, accompanied by detectives from Philadelphia and Pittsburgh, reached Beaver Falls on the evening accommodation train in search of the parties—Allen, Smith and Brown, above named; the officers being armed with criminal warrants for their arrest. On inquiry made, it was discovered that the three Philadelphia "Swallows" Allen, Smith & Brown, —having in some way ascertained that the officers of the law were on their tracks—had left on the Erie express at 10 o'clock on the night previous.

This matter was stirred up in Beaver Falls by the following dispatch received from the chairman of the Democratic State Central Committee.

"PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 3, 1872.

Rutan has twenty men at Beaver range for their arrest; but take no decided action until you hear from me. Cleland. McMullen is to be an inside officer and count Democratic votes for Republican.

This job was fixed up here by Quay, Rutan and Mackey. Proceed at once and lay the ground work for the exposure. I have telegraphed to McClelland about this. You will also find them in other parts of the Senatorial District.

Signed, J. S. Randall."

As corroborative of the above we append the following letter, received on last Saturday morning, from Robert Morris, a descendent of Hon. Robert Morris, one of the signers of the Declaration of Independence:

"PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 3, 1872.

W. W. Irwin, esq.

DEAR SIR:—I have reliable information that Johnny Maginnis, ex-member of the Legislature, and now private detective for Mackey and Quay, has sent up to Beaver Falls, three men from this city, one or more of whom are to act as inside officers at that place, at the election. Their names are Jas. McMullen, David Roach and "Specks," the last one going by that name on account of wearing eye glasses.

There is to be some "Philadelphia arithmetic" done in your county on next Tuesday.

I have notified Mr. Townsend at Beaver Falls of this matter.

Yours, very truly,

Robert Morris."

From the foregoing and following startling developments it will appear conclusively to the voters of Beaver county, that through the agency of the Treasury ring leaders in this county, the grossest fraud was in inception, and its perpetration was only prevented by commendable vigilance which started the officers of the law on the track of the villains who were to be used to defeat the will of the people. We appeal to the honest voter to aid in keeping Hartranft and Rutan, members of the iniquitous ring of Simon Cameron, from high places which they would prostitute to the basest purposes.

The ballot box must be kept sacred. Its pollution cannot be tolerated; those who have been guilty of attempts so to do should be visited with defeat, and we know we are not appealing in vain to all unprejudiced men to preserve the purity of the ballot by which alone Republican government can be maintained, and its blessings perpetuated.

Read the facts above published and be not deceived by any denials set afloat by the ring, whose waning fortunes can only be propped up by falsehood.

Remember that the fraudulent Inspector who fled before the vengeance of the law, was appointed at the solicitation of Hartranft, Quay and Rutan's friends in Beaver Falls. Remember, too, that the evidence shows that Quay, Rutan & Mackey set this thing up in Philadelphia. Will fraud be sustained or rebuked?

W. W. IRWIN, Chn Vig. Com.
E. P. KUHN, Mem. Dem. S. C. C.

(From the Pittsburgh Leader of Saturday.)

Yesterday was published a letter from the professional ballot-box stuffers and repeaters at Beaver Falls, and addressed to "Dear John" McGinnis, of Philadelphia. That letter, or a copy of it, was brought to this city by Officer Revel Lytle, of Philadelphia, who came to effect the arrest of Michael Sullivan, the chief of the repeating gang in this city, who was wanted to answer a charge of assault and battery. Sullivan, who was in this city, had become alarmed and fled before the officer's arrival.

AN EXPEDITION.

Last evening Alderman Strain, G. W. Guthrie, Esq., Constable Hyer and Detectives Long and Pender, of this city, Wm. H. Reel, Esq., of Allegheny and Officer Revel Taylor, of Philadelphia, went down to Beaver Falls to arrest, if possible, the repeaters there. Upon arriving there they found that the three men, James McMullin, David B. Roach and Charles Speck, had been there and had rooms at the Metropolitan hotel since the 21st of August. Mr. Taylor, who knows the men personally described them and ascertained that they had been registered there as James Brown, Wm. Smith and Jas. M. Allen. They had given out that they were about to open a writing school, and had even engaged a hall professedly for that purpose. The parties in search of the repeaters were informed that a man answering to the description of Sullivan, had arrived there day before yesterday, and had a consultation with the other three men, after which they all left on the night express for Erie. Finding the men had skipped the party, which had been increased by the addition of the sheriff of Beaver county, went to the house of

THE POSTMASTER,

J. L. B. Dawson, and rapped for admittance. That official raised a window and asked, "Who's there?—What do you want?" Alderman Strain replied, "We have come down to see about Mackey's friends."

The postmaster then came down and ushered Messrs. Strain and Taylor into his parlor, where an interesting conversation took place. Mr. Strain asked what had become of "the men"

The postmaster replied affirmatively, thinking he recognized the speaker, "Oh, yes! I saw you in the Allegheny bank this afternoon, when I went to see Mr. Mackey.

Mr. Strain said, "Yes." Then "the devil is to pay in Pittsburgh. The Democrats have found this thing all out." He then asked the postmaster if he had written that letter, showing the one published in the Leader of yesterday. He answered he had not written the letter, but it was all true, and he asked:

"What the devil can be the matter with John McGinnis? He must have got drunk and lost the letter, or he has sold us out."

Strain said, "Yes, they know all about it in Pittsburgh."

The postmaster then spoke as if he knew all about the business having been arranged (as it was arranged in Lafferty's saloon, on Ninth street, in Philadelphia). He also said that "Coffee-pot" Wallace was sending out a lot of naturalization papers for the Irish and Dutch, but he would fix that.

Strain then asked him how the people were down there on the gubernatorial election. He said he had the mills all right, and they would stop on the day of election and make the men vote. But they thought that that would be too transparent and they would just send wagons after the men and bring them in as they wanted them. I told him to work hard, because it would require all the energy he could bring to bear to make it successful. "Then we did him good night and left him in ignorance of whom we were," says the alderman, all of whose statements are substantiated by Mr. Taylor.

The people of Beaver Falls are very much excited over the developments and express loud indignation against Mr. J. L. B. Dawson, who is the person referred to in the postscript of the letter. The three men had been looked upon as suspicious characters for some time, in consequence of their mysterious movements, which soon excites comment in a small place like the village of Beaver Falls. The party from this city ascertained that "Specks" was to be a supervisor of the election, and he was to appoint one of his companions clerk. The third was to operate outside. In order that the matter may be thoroughly understood, we again present the letter, which was obtained from McGinnis' pocket while he was drunk and copied. Upon recovering his consciousness he thrust his hand [illegible] FRIEND JOHN:—Yours of the 23d is received. Everything seemed to be all right until to-day, when we had a consultation with the parties here. They are going to allow a democrat to go inside, and I am to go as "Speck's" clerk to the counter's room. Roach will be outside to attend to the repeaters. It will be God-damn hard to do the work now. The counters' room consists of one republican clerk (that is "specks" and I) and one democratic clerk. One reads the tickets off and hands them to the other; so you see it won't be such an easy thing. But it must be done if "hell freezes." They weaken seemingly at times, but we stiffen them up with the hope that we will take all the responsibility and know no body in the transaction. Give me your idea which is the best way to work. Is it on the inside? Now, about the counties of which you speak, they know nothing up here. Now and then you see a man that passed through there, but he cannot tell you what makes him think so. There will be thirty or thirty-five republicans in this one place that will cut Hartranft, but we will make it ten when counted. How's that? We are all well, and hope things will end the same; but it isn't so soft as they or we thought. We will have to exert every energy to succeed. "Specks" is fixing up the window-book. The democrats are looming up. They say they have been holding up until the republicans get out of breath, and they will come in on the home-stretch. Things are getting monotonous, and we are counting the days when the swallows will homeward fly.

Write as soon as you receive this, as we have not many days to remain. Would have wrote sooner, only for waiting to get the information concerning the inside arrangements. With the assurance that if we receive the least support, or have the slightest opportunity to do, everything will be successful, and you will have the pleasure of being complimented on the work highly, I remain yours, &c.,

Jim.

P. S.—Do not direct in care of J. L. B. D., as he don't wish it.

I remain yours, M.

AN AFFIDAVIT.

The foregoing is the statement published in yesterday evening's Leader, to the correctness of which Mr. Taylor testified as follows:

Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, County of Allegheny, City of Pittsburgh, ss:

Personally comes Revel Taylor, who, being duly sworn, saith that the foregoing statement, headed "Repeaters," (and as published in Saturday evening's Leader) is true; that affiant, in company with Alderman Strain, several officers, the sheriff of Beaver county, and one or two members of the bar, being together, went to the neighborhood of Postmaster Dawson's house; that Alderman Strain and affiant were admitted into the house by said Dawson, promptly, on mentioning the name of Mackey; that many useful matters of information were given by Mr. Dawson, and Dawson said that they, (the repeaters) were safe; they would not be caught; they were in Philadelphia by that time.

REVEL TAYLOR.

In testimony whereof, I have hereunto set my hand and affixed my notarial seal, at Pittsburgh, this fifth day of October, A. D. 1872.

E. F. CASSIDY, Notary Public.

To the Honest Voters of Beaver County.

On the 21st day of August, 1872, three notorious "repeaters" and operatives from Philadelphia, named respectively James McMullen, David B. Roach and Charles Speeks, arrived in Beaver Falls, and registered themselves at the Metropolitan hotel under the names of James Brown, Wm. Smith and James M. Allen. They remained in Beaver Falls without any apparent legitimate calling or object, and on Sept. 7th, 1872, were duly registered as voters. On Thursday, the 3d day of October, 1872, the name of one of these "repeaters," "James M. Allen, was proposed by two prominent Republicans of Beaver Falls, to John C. Hart, esq., Clerk of Courts, as one of the Return Inspectors of the elections of that borough. The appointment was actually made and is writing by Hart, (who we think was hardly aware of the man Allen's purpose and character,) but before the day it was discovered that we were informed of the contemplated fraud by a dispatch from Philadelphia, and Mr. Nelson was substituted for Allen as Inspector.

On Friday evening detectives arrived from Philadelphia and Pittsburgh in search of the "repeaters" above named, but found that they had been spirited away the night preceeding.

The damning fact that James M. Allen—a man well-known as a rough and a "repeater" in Philadelphia, a stranger in Beaver Falls, and registered as having no occupation—was, upon the recommendation of prominent Republicans, appointed Inspector of elections for the borough, prior to Mr. Nelson's appointment, WE ARE PREPARED TO PROVE.

Voters of Beaver county, why were good men and true in the Republican party passed by, and a man like Allen taken up for such a responsible position? Is there not fraud in this thing?

I know that James M. Allen above named, was appointed one of the return inspectors of election for Beaver Falls borough; I saw and read the certificate of his appointment, after it was made out, on the afternoon of October 3d, 1872.

SEVERE GALE & WRECKS.

A dispatch from Buffalo, last week says: The old barge Iron City, with a cargo of oil from Cleveland to Buffalo, foundered and sunk last night near Sturgeon Bay, eighteen miles from here. As she had no small boat it is supposed that her captain, R. C. Gucning, of this city, and one woman and four men were drowned. The barge was in tow of the tug Metis, and when near Point Albans the line parted. Neither tug nor barge having a small boat, it was impossible in the gale, to get another line to her. The tug came to Buffalo supposing the barge would cast anchor. This morning the latter was found a total wreck.

A dispatch of Sept. 30, from Buffalo, says reports of numerous disasters on Lake Erie by the severe gale yesterday and last night, are coming in fast. Vessels that left here Saturday afternoon were driven back to port, and many of them are beached along the Canada shore. In every case where the vessels succeeded in getting back into the harbor they were compelled to throw over their deck loads. Five canal boats laden with grain were sunk here in the creek during the prevalence of the gale. The schooner Yankee Blade is ashore near point Du Pelles, and the tug boats in charge of several barges which left here have not been heard from. Fears are entertained that they have been lost.

Later advices render it certain that the gale was much more severe on Lakes Huron, Michigan and Superior, and the consequent destruction of life and property much greater. The accounts of shipwreck and suffering are truly heart-rending.

Conclusion of the trial of Laura D. Fair—Serious Illness of her Counsel.

SAN FRANCISCO, CAL., Sept. 28.—The second trial of Mrs. Laura D. Fair, for the murder of Colonel Crittenden, was concluded yesterday afternoon. At five o'clock the District Attorney having concluded his argument for the prosecution, the Judge charged the jury in an able and impartial address, after which they retired for deliberation. At six o'clock His Honor sent a message to jury room to enquire whether they had agreed upon a verdict. The answer was returned that they had not. The Judge then announced that in order to allow the jury a chance for agreement that they might not be locked up all night, he would hold the court open until twelve o'clock. A large number of spectators remained in court to hear the result of the trial. At midnight the messenger returned from the jury with the information that the jury had balloted several times with the same result and that there was little prospect of their agreeing upon a verdict. The court then adjourned until this morning. Immediately after the adjournment of the court, Mr. N. Green Curtis, counsel for Mrs. Fair, withdrew to the restaurant near the court house for the purpose of taking dinner, while drinking a glass of water he was overcome by weakness and fell fainting to the floor. The excessive heat of the court room, together with the excitement attendable to bear up during the close of the trial. He was removed to the hotel, where, at this hour, 3 a. m., he still lies unconscious.

Probable Murder.

Two Men Shot by a Crazy Negro in Mercer county, Pa.

The Sharpsville Advertiser gives the particulars of an affair which created much excitement in Wheatland, Mercer county, on Sunday night last. Mr. J. Shaffner, manager of the firm of Wood, Son & Co., in that place, has a fine garden attached to his house, through which runs a path to a pump, where the furnacemen and the employees of the rolling mill are in the habit of getting their drinking water. On each side of the path or walk there is a row of peach trees.

Shaffner had in his employ a negro, named Harvey Hallow, said to be half witted or crazy, whose time was occupied in doing odd chores around the house. Shaffner, it is reported, gave Hallow instructions to shoot any one who might be seen taking peaches from the trees. Arming himself with a shot gun the negro stood guard. Shortly before twelve o'clock Sunday night, Hugh Cannon, an employee of the rolling mill, went for a pail of water, and stopped on the way for peaches, when the negro fired, inflicting a slight wound.

Soon afterwards Michael Callahan, a furnace man, went for water, stopped at one of the peach trees and commenced to shake it to get some of the ripe peaches. Hallow immediately fired at Callahan, the charge taking effect in the abdomen of the latter, and wounding him so severely that he will probably die. The news of the affair spread rapidly, and a large mob was soon collected around Shaffner's residence, threatening to lynch both him and the negro. The interference of prominent citizens, however, prevented violence. Shaffner and Hallow were arrested on Monday morning and taken to Mercer, where they are now awaiting trial.—Pittsburgh Dispatch.

A Railroad Train Thrown from the Track.

Yesterday morning the Cincinnati Express met with an accident a short distance this side of Garrett's siding, about twenty-five miles from this city, by which two lives were lost and considerable property destroyed. The joint-bolts and plate connecting two rails were removed, and the rail displaced from gauge about six inches, by some person or persons, who could only have been inspired with the most reckless wickedness. The engine struck the displaced rail with tremendous force, hurling engine, tender and two express cars down an embankment over twenty-five feet in hight. The remainder of the train, with its precious freight of sleeping passengers, clung to the track and escaped destruction. But beneath the wreck the hapless engineer and fireman, S. Keller and P. Kline, were crushed to death. The murderous wretches who accomplished their fiendish purpose made their escape in the night. As soon as said could be procured the track was promptly cleared, and the passengers, who had so miraculously escaped the horrors of a terrible disaster, reached the city this morning.

The conductor of the train states that he saw the "track-walker" pass about ten minutes before the accident occurred, and as the track was in its proper position at the time the latter passed the point where the train was thrown, it is apparent that the malefactors were experienced hands at their diabolical work. The most searching inquiry has failed to pince suspicion upon any of the employees or others who have had connection with the road, and the matter, therefore, remains an obscure mystery. The party or parties who committed the deed took every precaution against a failure of their scheme, as they tied the wedge with rags to keep it in its proper position, and carefully covered the misplaced track with paper in order that the position of the rails would not be observed.

Keller resided near Elizabethtown, and Kline lived at Harrisburg. Both were unmarried.

A Pow-wow with the President—Appeal from Chief Grass and Reply of the President.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 28.—The delegation of Indians now here, representing the Unepapas, Blackfeet, upper and lower Yanctonians, headed by J. C. O'Conor, agent of the Grand River Agency, and Assistant Secretary Cowan, had an interview with the President to-day. After they had shaken hands with the President he inquired if there was anything special which they desired to say to him. Then Grass stepped to the front, and, through the interpreter, said, "He never had anything against the white man. You sent for me before, but I did not like to come. You sent for me again, and I came. Since I have seen you I have been pleased. We want room at our reservation, and don't want to be crowded. We all mind the Great Father, and do what he tells us. Our people are all working, but are poor." The President inquired as to the nature of the land upon which the tribe is located, and inquired if anything had been said to them about moving them into the Indian country. Secretary Cowan replied in the affirmative.

The President then, addressing the Indians, said he would like to see them on fertile lands, where it would be easy for them to make a living, and, when they should be willing to go on such lands, the Government would send men, and learn them how to build houses. Their young men especially should be instructed. It was for them to think about it. Unless they wanted to go he did not want to make them. They could go back to their homes now, and talk the matter over this year to their people. If they would not agree to go he would not compel them. Above all things, they should be at peace with the white people, who outnumbered them a great many times, and if a conflict should come it would be much worse for the Indians. He did not want to fight them, but protect them and care for them. Above all things, too, they should have their young people instructed.

The white people were increasing rapidly, and in a few years it would be much worse than it is now. Anything they wanted now could be asked of the Commissioner of Indian Affairs and Secretary of the Interior, who would act for him. The Grass said the land of his reservation was bad, but he was raised in that country and he wanted to stay there. He knew it was not good, but he wanted to stay on it, and did not want any white man to come on it. They also wanted Mr. O'Conor, their agent, to remain there.

The President assured them that no change should be made in the agent; and, further, that he did not want to force them on the land. He would do all he could to instruct them and to protect them, and he hoped that their young people would grow up instructed in all the arts of civilization. As the result of official inquiry instituted by the military authorities, it appears that the recent newspaper reports of threatened troubles in the Creek Nation, in which it was alleged that the United States troops from Fort Gibson were sustaining one side, were false. Colonel Grierson, commanding at Fort Gibson, telegraphs that the troops did not interfere at all in the trouble in the Creek Nation. He alone met the head men of both factions at their special request, and succeeded in bringing them together in friendly council, when all their difficulties were amicably settled by themselves.

From China.

SAN FRANCISCO, October [illegible] steamer China arrived at eight o'clock this morning. She left Hong Kong on the 27th of August, and Yokohama September 7. Among the passengers are twenty-nine of the officers and men of the America. Early Saturday morning, the 24th of August, the America arrived at Yokohama, and during the day landed all the passengers and cargo for the port, and transferred to the Shanghai branch steamer what was for North China. There remained on board the officers and crew, two first-class passengers and one hundred and seventy-five Chinese for Hong Kong. At 11 at night the fire was discovered, and it burned till the afternoon of Sunday. The vessel was towed out of the way of shipping and sunk. Three Americans, fifty-nine Chinamen besides Japanese lost their lives. There was $200,000 in treasure and light freight on board. The ship had been coaling during the day. At ten she was reported all safe and the officers retired. A little before eleven the stewardess smelt something burning, and smoke was discovered rising from the freight deck below the ladies saloon. The alarm was sounded and Captain Doane, who was then in the saloon with the hose, was driven back by the smoke, when, with a sudden and furious roar, the flames burst forth, deciding the fate of the ship. The smoke prevented the flooding of the magazine, and attention was turned to saving the passengers. The Chinamen were aroused and the ladder gave way, precipitating them in water. Several unsuccessful attempts were made to sink the burning ship by shots from the war vessels.

A court of inquiry was convened August 31st. Consul Shephard presiding, assisted by Delong, and Captains Shirley and Perry. After hearing the evidence it was found that the fire apparatus was not in good working order. The time that elapsed before the stream was started, denoted want of preparation or lardiness in the engineer's department. If steam to the amount of twenty pounds had been on the donkey boiler at the time the alarm was given first, and proper expedition used in working it, the fire might have been extinguished and the ship saved. Praise was justly due the officers and crew for their gallantry and perseverance. The court was convinced that the fire was the result of intention, nor by accident. The inducement may have been antipathy toward the steamship company or officers, or the fact that that the Chinese passengers were supplied large sums of money.

Admiral Alden at the German Court.

Admiral Alden reports from Gluckstadt, September 14, to the Navy Department the visit to our fleet of Prince Adalbert, Admiral of the Prussian navy, who expressed the highest satisfaction with the condition of the vessels. The Admiral also reports having visited Berlin with several of his officers on the occasion of the recent reunion of the Emperors of Germany, Austria and Russia, and says:

"We were received with the most distinguished courtesy and consideration; and so soon as they were informed by United States Minister Bancroft of our presence in the city, we were notified that we would be regarded as guests, of the Emperor—that apartments and horses were placed at our disposal. On the seventh instant we witnessed a parade of thirty-five thousand men, after which we were presented to the Emperor and Empress of Germany, and had the honor of dining with them at the palace, in company with their illustrious visitors and many of the most distinguished personages of the Empire, and on the eighth, ninth and tenth of September, the Rear-Admiral and his officers were presented to their Royal Highnesses. The Crown Prince and Crown Princess, formed part of the Emperor's staff by invitation, witnessed the manœuvers at Spandau, dined with the Emperor's staff, and attended a concert and supper at the Imperial palace. Throughout all these ceremonies, says Admiral Alden, it gave me the most sincere satisfaction to receive from the three emperors, from all the members of the Imperial family and from all the high officers of court the very gracious and cordial attentions by which they were pleased to show their high regard and friendly feeling toward the people and government of the country to which I belong.

The report concludes with the expression of thanks for the kind attentions received from the United States Minister, Bancroft.

DIED.—Adam Moyer, carpenter, of Lebanon, made a very narrow escape from a sudden death, on Satuday last. He was engaged at work with one of his hands, Mr. Joseph Dissinger, at Stricker's mill. Mr. Moyer was on the first story and Mr. Dissinger on the second. Dissinger was cutting with his hatchet, when it flew off the handle, and with a great force, the sharp part struck Mr. Moyer on the head, cutting an artery and making an ugly wound, the blood spouting out alarmingly. Dr. Linaweaver was called as soon as possible, and tied up the artery and sewed up the cut.

And being worn out and tired by lifting hollow-ware heavy enough to make a load for a man; also getting their arms and hands burned and scalded by vessels unadapted to culinary purposes. A Beautiful Experiment.—The following beautiful chemical experiment may be easily performed by a lady, to the great astonishment of a circle at her tea party: Take two or three leaves of red cabbage, cut them into small bits, put them into a basin, and pour a pint of boiling water on them; let it stand an hour, then pour it off into a decanter. It will be a fine blue color. Then take four wine glasses; into one put six drops of vinegar; into another six drops of solution of soda; into a third a strong solution of alum, and let the fourth remain empty. The glasses may be prepared some time before, and the few drops of colorless liquid that have been placed in them will not be noticed. Fill up the glasses from the decanter, and the liquid poured into the glass containing the acid will become a beautiful red; the glass containing the soda will became a fine green; that poured into the empty one will remain unchanged. By adding a little vinegar to the green it will immediately change to a red, and on adding a little solution of soda to the red it will assume a fine green, thus showing the action of acids and alkalis on vegetable blues.

A late number of the New York Financier contains the following:

"Within the last year or two municipal bonds have grown very much in favor with private investors. Previous to that time they were principally taken by savings banks and insurance companies. In the West money is scarce, and the rates of interest high, in consequence of which the bonds of the Western States yield better returns than those of the older and more wealthy States. No better proof of their safety can be given than the fact that one of the oldest and most successful savings banks in New England has for the last twenty years invested the principal part of its means in in this class of securities, and they give as their experience that they have never lost a dollar by such investments. Messrs. W. N. Coler & Co., No. 22 Nassau street, were the pioneers, and are now the leading house in this branch of business in New York."

Their advertisement can be found in this number of our paper.

Second six months, at the rate of $4,735.49 per mile per annum.

Increase, 42 17-100 per cent.

Third six months, at the rate of $5,872.93 per mile per annum.

Increase, 21 45-100 per cent.

Fourth six months, incomplete, but on a basis of previous results, may safely be estimated at the rate of $7,132.67 per mile per annum. Present indications show that the estimate will be exceeded.

An extension of the L., B. & W. Road is now in course of construction from Champaign, Ill., to the Mississippi River at Keokuk. It passes through a populous country, which insures it a good local business, and being the connecting link in a great East and West trunk line, it will have from the start an unusually large through business. The bonds are only issued upon completed road, and would seem to be a safe and reliable investment. They are advertised for sale in our paper.

Important Steamboat Case.

The Louisville Courier Journal contains the proceedings of an important steamboat case. Daniel Murphy, appellant, vs. W. J. May, et al., appellees. The case came up before the Jefferson county (Ky.) Court of Common Pleas. The facts in the case are as follows; "On the 11th day of March, 1867, the appellees, who owned and were navigating the steamboat Mercury, in the White and Mississippi rivers, took on their boat at Clover Bend, upon Black river, a tributary of White river, in the State of Arkansas, 206 miles and three horses for transportation, by the usual route, to Memphis Tenn., under an ordinary contract of affreightment between them and the appellant, as the owner of the mules and horses. As the boat proceeded on the way, descending White river, that stream was found in many places, to have so overflowed the adjacent country that the usual channel for navigation was often only discernible by the current of the river, and the timber standing upon and indicating its banks. When near the mouth of White river, and at a point where it and the Arkansas river approach within about five miles of each other and are connected together by a navigable "cut off," the Mercury was stopped for the purpose of obtaining wood from a flatboat, which was fastened to a tree at the overflown bank, near if not quite opposite the mouth of the "cut off," into which a strong and rapid current was running, perhaps increased by back-water from the Mississippi and in the excess in the volume of water in the White river, owing to the same condition, over that in the Arkansas. In the attempt to resume her course the boat, from some cause, which is one of the principle subjects of inquiry in this case, was run or forced into the "cut off," and, when near the Arkansas river, was wrecked upon a snag; and all the live stock on board, as well as about thirty persons, were drowned.

"This action was brought to recover damages for the loss of the appellant's property. A trial of an issue involving the question of legal liability resulted in a verdict and judgment for the defendants, which are now before this court for revision."

After stating the principle of law upon which the action was brought and all the circumstances of the trial, the judge delivered this final opinion:

"The refusal of the court to give this instruction is complained of as an error to the prejudice of the appellant. The general principle may be admitted, that if the boat was in a place of actual or comparative safety, which, owing to the wind and proximity to the cut off, or other causes, it was perilous then to attempt to leave, it was the duty of the officer in charge of the boat to wait as long as necessary, to avoid the danger. But it was the province of the jury to determine, from all of the evidence, which may have depended, in a great measure, on the direction and violence of the wind at the precise time of starting the boat, and on her situation and position with reference to the cut off and other causes of danger, whether moored at the shore, as assumed in the instruction, or lashed, with the wood boat, to a tree entirely surrounded by deep water, as the evidence conduces to prove. It would have been palpably erroneous for the Court to assume, as it was in effect asked to do, that the boat was landed and tied at the shore, or that danger from the wind existed before the attempt was made to resume the voyage. There was therefore, in refusing the instructions which were given at the instance of the defendants. With reference to the only remaining question, whether the verdict is sustained by the evidence, it may suffice to say that after carefully reading and re-reading all the evidence, much of which is conflicting, we are satisfied that there is no such preponderance of the weight of the evidence against the finding of the jury as would have authorized the ordering of a new trial in the court below, or should require a reversal of the judgment by this Court. Whereupon the judgment is affirmed."

"Too Thin."—EDITOR ARGUS: On Wednesday evening, Oct. 2d, Hon. Bu(t)cher Swoope addressed the Grant Republicans of New Brighton, and, (in the language of the "Little Major."—Drum Major it should have been) "settled that question most effectually—i. e. The 16th resolution of the Republican platform, and the explanation given by Mr. Raster, it's author,—and this is how he did it, the "Press" says:

"He said that the Convention meant by it to explain the status of the party in relation to the States rights doctrines of John C. Calhoun, and that it had no reference to temperance laws whatever—Herman Raster or any other irresponsible scribbler to the contrary notwithstanding. Ordinary common sense, if nothing else, should teach that."

Now, why did not the editor of the Press (and also the editor of the Radical) have enough "ordinary common sense" to so explain it when it appeared in the ARGUS and Conservative, or didn't the Major know it until the Bu(t)cher told him. States rights won't go down. Why should the editor of a German paper in Chicago, the head and front of the German element, who has been fighting the Sunday and Temperance laws of that city for the past three years, couch his resolution in those terms and then make the explanation he did? This matter has been before the people since the 10th day of July, and was Mr. Swoope's version of it correct. we should have heard of "another lie nailed" long ere this; but not one Grant Republican paper, (so far as the writer has seen), has dared to deny the correctness of the explanation, nor has one single member of the Platform Committee dared come out and deny Mr. Raster's assertion, that, "it was adopted by the Platform Committee, with the full and explicit understanding that it's purpose was the discountenancing of all so called Temperance (Prohibatory) and Sunday laws." Your correspondent sent the solution &c, in question to the editor of the New York Times, asking for information as to its genuineness, but did he reply to it? Not much, and why? Simply because he dared not. He also sent it to the Pitts-Chronicle, and it appeared in the issue of Aug. 30th, with the following by the editor. "The above is certainly explicit enough and undoubtedly correct," has any one dared to publicly contradict that? The Hon. U. S. District Attorney also denominated Mr. Raster as an "irresponsible scribbler." Let us see for a moment who and what he is. Herman A. Raster, is the editor of the German Republican Paper of Chicago, (The "Staats Zeitung") the leading German paper of the north west. He was the representative of the Germans at the Philadelphia Convention, and he was the author of the 16th plank of the platform there adopted and this plank was adopted by the leaders of the Party and the Convention solely for the purpose of gaining the liquor dealers, beer brewers, and German infidel vote, without which the great and good Republican party is no more. Christian and Temperance Republicans, the price paid for this mongrel vote is you and your principles. Will you submit to it? Allow not only your temperance principles but your moral and religious principals to be bartered for the whiskey vote? Are you a slave, that the principles you hold most sacred must be sacrificed to secure the election of unprincipled politicians? Weak you in the name of God and of humanity, to think of these things.

But, Mr. Editor, although no responsible party has dared deny these things publicly, a great deal of it has been done in a more private way; it has been denounced as "a prohibition lie," as "unauthorized and far fetched," 'forgery,' &c., and we have a certain prominent official in the county, who says that "the platform committee did not know the meaning of the resolution when they adopted it." Complimentary certainly to the committee and to the body that would appoint a committee that did not have brains enough to know what they were signing their names to. Again, a certain ex-minister of the gospel, who, by-the-way, gets his bread and butter from the great and good, puts it thus: "That resolution is simply "Buncombe" put in to please the fancy."—Whose fancy pray? certainly not of the honest, moral class of people; not much, but of the beer guzzling, whisky drinking class—and does not mean anything." Now, if such be true, we say the more shame to the party that adopted it, and to the men who support it in coming before the people with a direct, willful lie, for the sake of making votes.

But, gentlemen, these explanations won't do, they are entirely "too thin." We, as a people, have the meaning as given by its author, and until some responsible person publicly contradicts this explanation and offers one that is satisfactory, the people are bound to accept it; Bu(t)cher Swoope and all the rest of the "bread and butter" politicians to the contrary, notwithstanding.

And now, should any of your readers wish further proof I send you a copy of a letter received by Mr. John W. Hayman, Leopard P. O., Chester Co., Pa., from Mr. Raster in relation to this matter:

"MR. HAYMAN.

SIR: The letter you sent me is genuine. It expresses my construction of the section. I have to state, as a fact, however, that the resolution was drawn in imitation of a similar one of the 'Liberal Jefferson City Platform,' and that the word unconstitutional, which occurred in the resolution, is construed by the authors of that Jefferson City resolution as confining the effect of it to such cases of political concern now before the people, no questions touching the peace, prosperity and happiness of families or neighborhoods upon which people vote, it seems to me is of greater value. The dram-shop does its bad business by authority and protection of law, I wish to see that law changed.

Please prove your assertions, Mr. Editor, and demonstrate by fact and date that the Republican party is the only true temperance party, and I will vote with it as heretofore, but If you cannot do this as you say you can, I shall be constrained as a good citizen to vote with the Prohibition party. P.

Messrs. Agnew & Buchanan, Attorneys and counsellors at law, have opened an office on Third street, nearly opposite the ARGUS office. These gentlemen are of excellent character, well read, and will doubtless receive a liberal share of collecting and other legal business. See their card in this paper.

PETER CARTWRIGHT.

Wonderful Life of the Good Old Methodist Clergyman.

The Rev. Peter Cartwright died on Wednesday at his residence near Pleasant Plains, Sangamon county, Ill., aged eighty-seven years. Born in the Old Dominion in the cloudy days just after the revolution young Cartwright went through scenes in his infancy fully equal to the most exciting episodes of his latter career. His father had been a soldier in the revolutionary war, and shortly after the declaration of Independence he resolved to emigrate to Kentucky with his family, then the favorite hunting ground of the Indians. Young and hardy pioneers were pushing forward from the old colonies to this new and fertile country, and the Indians, loth to surrender the land "of canes and turkeys," opposed a determined front to the emigrants. The conflict between the races was long and bloody, and ended in the decimated tribes of red men being driven from the disputed territory.

FRONTIER LIFE IN KENTUCKY.

Cartwright's plain narrative of his father's journey from Amherst, Virginia, to Lincoln county, Kentucky, is thrilling in the simplicity of its horrible details. One dark night the company, consisting of two hundred families and one hundred young men, halted at a place called "Camp Defiance," where a number of emigrant families had been murdered by the savages. It was a solemn, gloomy time; every heart quaked with fear. The young men were placed as sentinels all round the camp, and the heads of families were placed around outside of the women and children, and some were ordered to take their stand outside still, in the edge of the brush. Among the outside sentinels was Cartwright's father. Shortly after he took his stand he heard something approaching him, grunting like swine. Cartwright fired and killed an Indian, who was found with a rifle in one hand and a tomahawk in the other, the ball having pierced the center of his forehead.

PETER'S FIRST MISSIONARY WORK.

Soon after the arrival of the family in Lincoln county, young Cartwright's mother made the acquaintance of two traveling preachers, John Page and Benjamin Northeut, early pioneers in the West. In the fall of 1793, the Cartwrights moved to the Green River country, in the south of Kentucky, and settled nine miles south of Russelville. A Methodist preacher named Jacob Lewis visited the family, and asked leave to preach in their cabin. Cartwright's father, who was indifferent in matters of religion, assented, and Peter, then nine years of age, started on his first missionary excursion to summon the neighbors to hear the preacher.

THE REGULATORS.

Logan county was at this time known as "Rogues' Harbor," on account of the multitude of horse thieves and other desperadoes who flocked thither from all parts of the Union. The honest citizens formed themselves into a band of regulators, and had a pitched battle with the thieves in Russelville. The Regulators were defeated, but afterwards rallied, and hunted down and killed many of the desperadoes. In those days there was not a newspaper printed south of the green river. It is interesting in those degenerating days to know that the Cartwrights raised their own cotton and flax, water rotted the flax, broke it by hand, scutched it, picked the seed out of the cotton with their fingers, and the mothers and sisters carded, and wove it into cloth for the family. Of this all their garments and bed clothes were made.

A WILD YOUTH CONVERTED

Wicked boys will be filled with renewed hope when they learn that young Cartwright, according to his own story, was a wild, reckless boy, and delighted in horse-racing, cardplaying and dancing, and went into young company. Though not initiated into the tricks of vulgar gamblers, he was very successful in winning money. Peter's evil habits will hardly be wondered at when it is remembered that his teacher was a fugitive murderer from Georgia, who had killed the Sheriff when the latter attempted to arrest him for crime.

Peter was converted in 1801. The change was very sudden. He had been to a wedding about five miles from home and danced until a late hour. Soon after his return home, while pacing the floor reflecting on the manner in which he had spent the day and evening, all of a sudden blood rushed to his head, his heart palpitated, and in a few minutes he turned blind. He imagined himself about to die, and cried for mercy, and promised to serve the Lord, if spared. After recovering from the attack, he sold his race horse, burned a pack of cards, and took to reading the Testament. One day, while in anguish over his sinful past, it appeared to him that he heard a voice from heaven, saying: "Peter, look at me!" His sins, however, were not forgiven until some timeafter, when he received a heavenly intimation to that effect. Peter commenced to attend camp meetings, and he tells the following curious story of what occurred at one of them:

A DUTCHMAN'S CROSS.

The Rev. Mr. Lee was preaching from the text, "Except a man deny himself, and take up his cross, he cannot be my disciple." They were deeply touched by Mr. Lee's preaching. After services Mr. Lee mounted his horse, and started for his evening appointment. After riding some distance, he saw a little ahead of him a man trudging along carrying a woman on his back. The traveler was a small man, the woman large and heavy. Mr. Lee rode up, and found that it was the Dutchman carrying his scolding wife. "You did tell us," said the Dutchman, "that we must take up the cross, or we could not be saved, and dish woman is de greatest cross I have."

Peter was formally received into the M. E. church in June 1801, and soon became well known as a preacher and exhorter. He was called the Kentucky Boy. A curious epidemic was then prevalent among Methodists, called the jerks, and resembling St. Vitus dance. While listening to a stirring sermon people would be seized with convulsive jerking all over. Finely dressed ladies and gentlemen were seized in this way, and found it impossible to resist, says Cartwright.

HOW CARTWRIGHT ESCAPED A WHIPPING

At one of my appointments in 1804, there were two very finely dressed, fashionable young ladies, attended by two brothers with loaded horsewhips. The house was crowded, and the young ladies took seats near where I stood. I was unwell, and had a phial of peppermint in my pocket. Before I commenced preaching I took out my phial and swallowed a little of the peppermint. The congregation was melted into tears, and both the young girls took the jerks.

A man warned me, as I dismissed the assembly, that the brothers had sworn they would horsewhip me for giving their sisters the jerks. I went out to the young men and expostulated. One said he had seen me take out a phial, in which I carried some truck that gave the sisters the jerks As quick as thought, it came into my mind how to get clear of my whipping, and pulling the phial out, I cried: "Yes, if I gave your sisters the jerks, I'll give them to you." I moved toward him. He backed, I advanced, and he wheeled and run, warning me not to come near him, or he would kill me. It raised the laugh on him, and I escaped a whipping.

The jerks, appear to have proved fatal in some instances, and Cartwright tells of a drunken rowdy who was seized with them, and swore he would drink the d—d jerks to death. His bottle came in contact with a sapling and was broken. The rowdy pitched a violent jerk, snapped his neck and expired.

FRIGHTENING A JEW WITH PRAYER

Cartwright tells how he frightened a Hebrew who attempted to disturb a prayer meeting.

One evening a Jew appeared at our evening prayer meeting and said it was idolatry to pray to Jesus Christ. I asked him, "Do you really think there is a God?" He answered, "Yes." I said, "Well, let us test the matter. Get down and pray to God to stop this work, and if it is wrong he will answer your petition and stop it. If it is not, all hell cannot stop." Slowly he kneeled, cleared his throat and coughed. I said, "Now boys, pray with all your might that God may answer by fire." The Jew coughed again. We saw his confusion, and commenced praying at the top of our voices. He leaped up, started off, and we raised a shout.

While on the Sciota, Ohio, Circuit, in 1805-6, Cartwright attended a meeting at which a Presbyterian minister preached. The minister was a fine man, but given to drink. At the meeting he excused himself for this unaccountable love of whisky on the ground that his mother, before he was born, longed for whisky. Cartwright was indignant, and when he rose after the whisky-loving apologist, he said he thought the preacher's excuse was infinitely worse than drunkenness itself, for it was a downright lie and a slander on his mother.

WHIPPING A GANG OF RUFFIANS.

While on the Hockhocking Circuit, Cartwright was disturbed one Sunday morning, at a camp-meeting by the advent of a gang of roughs. When he was about half through his discourse, two young men entered, finely dressed, with loaded whips, and began to laugh and talk to the women. Cartwright ordered them to desist, and called for a magistrate. The officers of the law were afraid to interfere and Cartwright advanced on the ruffians. What followed is related in his own words:

One of them made a pass at my head with his whip, but I closed in with him and jerked him off the seat, I threw him down, and held him fast. He tried his best to get loose. I told him to be quiet or I would pound his chest well. The mob rushed to the rescue of the prisoner, and a drunken magistrate ordered me to release him. I refused and he swore he would knock me down. I told him to knock away. A friend, at my request, relieved me of my prisoner. The drunken justice made a pass at me. I parried the stroke seized him by the collar, and brought him, to the ground and jumped on him. I told him to be quiet or I would pound him well. The mob rushed up and knocked down several preachers. I gave my prisoner to another, and the ringleader and I met. He made three passes at me, and I gave him a blow in the ear, and dropped him to the earth.

The struggle resulted in a victory for the Methodists, and the fines and costs collected from the captured rowdies amounted to nearly $300.

EXPOSING AN IMPOSTOR.

In Marietta was a nondescript preacher named A. Sargent, with numerous followers. He called himself a millenial messenger, and professed to see visions and converse with angels. One Sunday night, at a Methodist camp-meeting, Sargent got some powder and lit a cigar, and then walked down to the bank of the river, distant one hundred yards, where stood a large stump. He put his powder on the stump and touched it with his cigar. The light of the powder was seen by many at the camp. Sargent lay there and when the people came he told them he had had a vision, that God had come down in a flash of light. Says Cartwright:

"I stepped up to him and asked him if an angel had appeared to him in that flash of light." He said, "Yes." I said "Sargent, did not that angel smell of brimstone?" "Why," he replied, "do you ask me such a foolish question?" "Because," I said, "if an angel has spoken to you at all, he is from the lake that burneth with fire and brimstone," and raising my voice I added, "I smell brimstone now."

I called to the people to see for themselves. They saw and cursed Sargent for a vile impostor. We were troubled no more with brimstone angels.

A HORROR OF WHISKY DRINKING PREACHERS.

Peter Cartwright had a horror of whisky and of whisky drinking preachers. He says:

"While settled in the Christian county a person calling himself a Baptist preacher called to stay all night with me. He was accompanied by his son. I disposed of his horses as best I could, and they partook of our fare. After supper they both stepped into another room, and when they returned I smelt whisky very strongly. Although these were not days of temperance, I thought it a bad sign, but said nothing. He returned to join in evening prayer. In the morning, as soon as morning prayer was over he again took out his bottle and asked me to take a dram. I declined. On leaving he said: "Perhaps, brother, you charge."

"Yes," said I, "all whisky loving preachers, who will not pray with me, I charge."

WHO IS GEN. JACKSON?

Cartwright, though not a radical abolitionist, had very swelling views of the equality of mankind. One day when he was preaching in Nashville, Gen. Jackson entered the church. Another preacher whispered a little loud, "Gen. Jackson has come in — Gen. Jackson has come in." Cartwright said audibly: "Who is Gen. Jackson? If he don't get his soul converted God will damn him as quick as he would a Guinea negro."

The congregation, Gen. Jackson and all, smiled and laughed outright. The resident preacher told Cartwright that Gen. Jackson would chastise him. The General, on the contrary, expressed himself highly pleased with his independence. "A minister of Jesus Christ," said Jackson, "ought to love everybody, and fear no mortal man."

A DISPUTE WITH A DOCTOR.

Many other anecdotes could be told of this eccentric and talented man, and there is one too good to let pass. He once had a dispute with a doctor relative to religion. The doctor said he wanted honest and unequivocal answers to a few questions.

"Did you ever hear religion?"
"No."
"Did you ever smell religion?"
"No."
"Did you ever taste religion?"
"No."
"Did you ever feel religion?"
"Yes."

"Now, then," said the doctor, with apparent triumph, "I have proved beyond doubt, by four respectable witnesses, that religion is not seen, heard, smelled, or tasted, and but one solitary witness, feeling, has testified that it is an experimental fact. The weight of evidence is overwhelming, and you must give up."

Cartwright asked, "Did you ever see a pain?"

"No."
"Did you ever hear a pain?"
"No."
"Did you ever taste a pain?"
"No."
"Did you ever smell a pain?"
"No."
"Did you ever feel a pain?"
"Certainly, I did, sir."

The doctor and his family were converted.

BLAZING HIS WAY.

Cartwright having been brought up in a log cabin, did not like climbing stairs, and when he took up his quarters in a hotel he preferred rooms on a lower floor. He once went to Chicago and booked himself at the Tremont House. The preacher was assigned to a room in the eighth or ninth story.

Soon after being shown to his room Cartwright rang the bell. A waiter was promptly in attendance. "I want an axe," said Cartwright. The astonished servant said he would procure one. Having procured an axe, Cartwright asked the waiter to guide him down stairs. At the first turn in the stairs, Cartwright blazed his mark in the walnut baluster. The dumb-founded waiter asked what he meant. "I want to know my way back to my room again," said Cartright. The preacher was assigned to a room at a more rural distance from mother earth.

Mr. Cartwright was first assigned to Pleasant Plains in 1853. In his old age he retained his faculties to an extraordinary degree, and his example has had no small effect in keeping up the old time spirit of Methodism.

CURTIN COMING!

The War Governor Soon to Speak:—The Battle Against Corruption—The Lines Rapidly Closing on the Pennsylvania Ring.

The lines of the people are fast closing upon the Cameron rings of the state, and the struggle between integrity and debauchery in Pennsylvania, and between organized crime and public order in Philadelphia, is no longer a doubtful one. For a time the ring leaders were defiant, and under the shelter of the flag of Grant they once hoped to seize the power of the executive, of the treasury, of the auditor general's office, of the sinking fund, and of the legislature, by the enforced election of Hartranft, Allen and the Cameron ring candidates for the legislature in this city. But their boldness has called into action the reserves of the people, and their defeat is now inevitable.

We are warranted in assuring our readers that our noble war governor, Andrew G. Curtin, will be able to speak within the next few days, and he will electrify the people by his bugle call for the regeneration of the political rule of our commonwealth. Whatever he may say on the Presidency, he will come to the front of the local battle against those who have usurped republican authority and prostituted it to peculation and the personal advancement of unworthy men in deffance of the popular will. Although still prostrated by painful illness and forbidden by his physician to read or write, he cannot be silent when his silence is insolently claimed as an approval of the corruption that has poisoned almost every channel of power in our state. We hope by to-morrow, or next day at the latest, to have his appeal to the people of Pennsylvania in behalf of integrity and competency in our places of public trust. There are tens of thousands of sincere republicans who will, as in times past, rally to the honored standard of their chief in this battle for the disenthralment of a mighty commonwealth.

With him in the good work will be the Hon. Ely Stifler, of Union, who was twice a representative, three years a senator (chosen without opposing votes), three years honored by a republican legislature with the control of the treasury when integrity was a requisite for state treasurers, and six years secretary of the commonwealth. A faithful citizen, a blameless public servant and a christian gentleman, he is of necessity pronounced against the domination that has crawled into the republican temple in Pennsylvania and made it a nest of corrupt money changers.

And cordially supporting Curtin and Stifler in this grand assault upon the ring rule of our state is Hon. Titian J. Coffey, who has just returned from Europe. He was the ablest of the republican senators in the early and honored achievements of the party, was assistant attorney general of the United States under Mr. Lincoln, and the first assistant who was called to sit in regular cabinet council in the absence of his chief.

There is no mistaking the significance of this move just on the eve of the great battle. It has been provoked by the unblushing boast of fraud that it will rule—and in mingled despotism, debauchery and malice for years to come in Pennsylvania. It has forced the invalid from his sick chamber and unobtrusive honesty from its retirement to struggle for the honor of our party, the purity of government and the manhood of the citizen.

Let the lines of the people close up for the conflict. But two weeks remain for action. Corrupt power will exhaust its almost boundless resources to save itself from merited destruction, but an aroused people can defy money, authority and fraud combined, when the good name and prosperity of a great State tremble in the balance. With Cameron, Hartranft, Allen and corrupt legislative candidates overwhelmingly beaten, as they will inevitably be, republicanism can win honest nominations and honest purposes, and preserve its supremacy for years to come. Forward, honest republicans, to reform and victory.—Philadelphia Press Sept. 23

To Drive Rats Away Without Poison.

We know of three methods: First the old French plan; this is followed chiefly in Paris by men who make it a business. They take a deep tub with water at the bottom, and a little elevation in the middle like an island, on which is the only place for one rat to sit on. The top is covered and has a large ballance valve opening downward; on the middle of this valve a piece of fried pork or cheese is fixed, and when a rat walks on it to get the cheese the valve goes down, drops the rat in the water, and moves back in position. A road is made from the rat hole to the top of the tub by means of a board rubbed with cheese, so as to make the walk attractive for the rat. In the course of a single night some ten, or twenty, or even more rats may go down, and if the island was not there they would be found most all alive in the morning quietly swimming around; but provision of the little island saves the trouble of killing them, because their egotistic instinct of self-preservation causes them to fight for the exclusive possession of the island, on which in the morning the strongest is found in solitary possession; all the others being killed and drowned around him.

Second, the New York plan invented by one of our friends. The floor near the rat hole is covered with a thin layer of moist caustic potassa. When the rats walk on this it makes their feet sore; these they lick with their tongues, which makes their mouth sore, and the result is they all shun this locality, not alone, but appear to tell all the rats in the neighborhood about it, and eventually the house is entirely abandoned by them, notwithstanding the houses around may be teeming with rats. This is the Dutch method; this is said to be used successfully in Holland; we have, however, never tried it. A number of rats are left together to themselves in a very large trap or cage, with no food whatever; their craving hunger will cause them to fight, and the weakest will be eaten by the strongest. After a short time the fight is renewed, and the next weakest is the victim, and so it goes on till one strong rat is left. When this one has eaten the last remains of the others, it is set loose; the animal has now aquired such a taste for rat flesh that he is the terror of ratdom, going round seeking what rat he may devour. In an incredible short time the premises are abandoned by all other rats, which will not come back before the cannibal rat has left or has died.—Manufacturer and Builder.

Tumor of 12 Years' Growth Cured by Radway's Resolvent.

BEVERLY, Mass., July 15, 1871.

DR. RADWAY:—I have had Ovarian Tumor in the ovaries and bowels. All the Doctors said "there was no help for it." I tried every thing that was recommended; but nothing helped me. I saw your Resolvent, and thought I would try it, but had no faith in it, because I had suffered for twelve years. I took six bottles of the Resolvent, and one box of Radway's Pills, and two bottles of your Ready Relief, and there is not a sign of tumor to be seen or felt, and I feel better, smarter, and happier than I have for twelve years. The worst tumor was in the left side of the bowels, over the groin. I write this to you for the benefit of others. You can publish it if you choose. HANNAH P. KNAPP.
